

OUR ROLE

We give day-to-day holistic care to our workers on the field. They consult us by either phone, email, skype or sometimes face-to-face, asking advice about medication, (minor) illnesses, health concerns for their children, etc. We also do 2-yearly health reviews with every worker and their family.

OUR PASSION

We try to support the workers in any way we can, so they stay fit and healthy and well-prepared for their role. If they are healthy physically, emotionally and spiritually they can perform the work God wants them to do.

MEKONG MINORITIES

http://omf.org/asia/mekong-minorities

We support a few hundred workers and their families, coming from different cultures and backgrounds, serving in different cultures and locations on the field.

We are available for medical emergencies 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

In Thailand there are opportunities as well to work with universities and medical professionals to improve their medical English, in order to advance the global medical research.

We are available to our leadership to provide medical insight in guiding the placement of future missionaries, so they will be put in the right place and position where they will be able to thrive.
